

United Nations Attacks Catholic Church

This will be just a brief response to that United Nations attack on the Catholic Church, and I want to say right off the bat that I am no fan of the United Nations: it is a One World Government system, and we know from Bible prophecy that the kingdom of the Antichrist will also be a One World system: it will be evil and it will enslave all of mankind. And the fact that the UN is attacking the Catholic Church gives me a lot of encouragement because it tells me that the Catholic Church is still the Body of Christ; it has not yet been taken over by the Antichrist or the False Prophet as Mary said would happen when she prophesied to the children at La Salette; 'Rome will lose the Faith and become the seat of the Antichrist'.

And, I also want to make it clear that I am not a Catholic official. I am a simple, retired, furniture engineer. I worked for many years at Ethan Allen Furniture, and I faithfully support the collection basket every week. And, I think this attack on the Catholic Church also shows that maybe the honeymoon between the media and Pope Francis is over and this would give the lie to those who claim that Pope Francis is a False Prophet. Now, I could be wrong. It may turn out that he will eventually take the Daily Sacrifice away from the Prince, that means he will take the Eucharist away from Jesus, and that is how the Bible says we will determine if he is a true Pope or a false Anti-Pope.

I do agree with one recommendation from that United Nations report, and that is the Catholic Church should turn over all files about possible priest paedophilia to civil authorities. However, I would add that all types of crime in the Catholic Church should be reported. And I'll give you an example: Archbishop Rembert Weakland of the Milwaukee Diocese stole $400,000 to pay his live-in boyfriend. That is not only a disgrace, that is grand larceny. He has never been charged with anything. In fact, he is currently living a comfortable retirement also paid out of the collection basket which we laypeople Catholics pay for.

On the other side of the coin, would Catholic priests who are charged with sexual molestation get a fair trial in the American judicial system? Just this past year, the California Legislature passed a law extending the statute of limitations back many more decades so that they could charge Catholic priests, who were accused thirty or forty years ago, and bring them to trial, however, they specifically exempted public school teachers who were charged with paedophilia. This law was not about protecting children; that law was about getting the Catholic Church. And Governor Brown, in his wisdom, vetoed that Anti-Catholic law. So, is this why the Catholic Church is reluctant to open up its files? Shouldn't the government education system also be required to open up their files?

But the United Nations did not say anything about government schools, nor does the media. The media is always quick to attack the Catholic Church, but they never say anything bad about public schools. I say what's good for the goose is good for the gander. I'm all in favor of extending the statute of limitations back as many years as you want, but you have to include everyone, otherwise, it's just Anti-Catholic bigotry. It's not about helping children, it's about getting the Catholic Church.

And now, I would like to explain as best I can, why the Catholic Church doesn't kick out offending priests or bishops like any other organization would do. The Catholic Church is not like an organization that has jails or judges. We are a religion. We follow our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. Even among our Lord's own twelve, hand-picked Apostles, one of them betrayed Him. Why should we be surprised that it is any different in his Body, the Church, today. There will always be bad apples, not just in the Catholic Church, but any denomination and in government schools. Our Lord did not ostracize Judas. I am sure when he sent out His Apostles two by two, to preach the Good Word, He included Judas. I do admit, paedophile priests or teachers should not be allowed contact with children.

That's why, for example, it is so absurd for President Obama to lecture the Boy Scouts that they should have homosexual Scout counsellors. Can you imagine that? That would be like the Girl Scouts having heterosexual males as counsellors. That is totally absurd! We have a fallen, human nature. All of us are sinners. Who among us can cast the first stone? So, in conclusion, I welcome your thoughts. Please comment below. Also, please remember I am not an expert on Catholic theology or Catholic dogma. If you have questions in those areas, please google your questions. I do know about Bible prophecy. If you want to get off topic, I'm always willing to talk about prophecy, but I would appreciate it if you just limited your comments to this United Nations attack on the Catholic Church, which, as I said, is very unfair.
